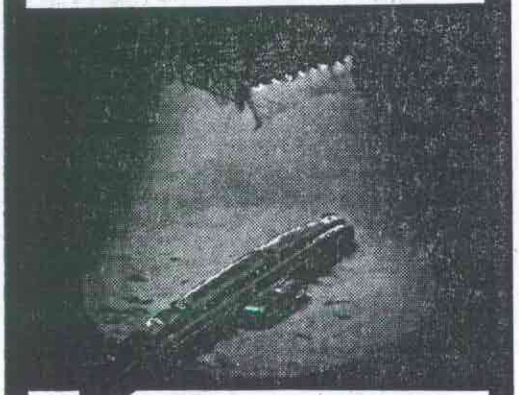
Book World | 11/12/78

The story of the most spectacular and costly espionage mission ever conducted by the CIA

For the first time, a participant in the top-secret half-billion-dollar operation tells how the CIA planned to retrieve a sunken Soviet submarine (so deeply buried the Russians couldn't even find it)—the most daring intelligence coup of the century. Here are all the behind-the-scenes details of the Hughes Glomar Explorer mission: the incredible technical skill involved, how the crew was recruited and trained, what we learned of Russian secret codes and technology, the near-confrontation with Soviet ships—a sensational, headline-making event that, to this day, neither Russia nor the U.S. will talk about.



A MATTER OF RISK

by Roy Varner and Wayne Collier

$10, now at your bookstore RANDOM HOUSE